- Vanessa: Hey, Sal. I'm coming over. I just left the club.
- Sally: Ok!
- Sally: So, how was Shimmer? Do you wish you stayed longer?
- Vanessa: It was good! There were a lot of people and Peter was lots of fun! The DJ was great, too. He spun some awesome tracks. I wish I wore more comfortable shoes, though. My feet are killing me!
- Sally: If I were you, I would carry a spare pair ... you know those foldable flats they sell now?

- Sally: If you exercised more, you wouldn't feel so broken right now.
- Vanessa: Well, if I had a private gym, like you, I would be able to! I need a coffee ...
- Sally: Coming right up!
- Vanessa: Thanks, Sal. You're the best. I wish I talked to more people there. I wish I weren't so shy ...
- Sally: Yeah, you need to get back in the game. Marco kind of killed the whole dating thing for you.
- Vanessa: Don't say that name aloud!
- Sally: If I were you, I'd be out there more!

Learning Points

The Second Conditional - Talking About Hypothetical Situations

You use the second conditional to talk about unreal or imaginary (hypothetical) situations in the present or future.

For example:

If I had a million dollars, I would buy a car.

Do you have a million dollars? No.

Is it possible to suddenly get a million dollars? Not really.

What would you do if you had a million dollars? Buy a car.

You use: If + Simple Past verb ... + would/could

If	Condition	Result
	past	would + base verb
If	I married Peter,	I would be happy.
If	I exercised more,	I could be in better shape.
If	I were you,	I would be jumping up and down.

You can also reverse the clauses:

I would be out more if I were you.

Notice that there is no comma when the result clause comes first.

Remember to use a comma (,) after the If clause.

In conversation, it is common to use contractions. (I would = I'd)

Examples:

- If I were you, I would carry a spare pair of shoes.
- If you exercised more, you wouldn't feel so broken right now.
- If I were you, I'd be out there more!

Learning Points

Talking About Wishes and Imaginary Situations

You use wish and the second conditional to talk about things you want or would like to be different now or in the future.

Wishes and sentences in the second conditional infer that what you want is probably not possible, or for some reason impossible.

Statement	Meaning
I wish it were all that easy!	It's not that easy.
I wish I could just go back for a few days and enjoy it all again.	I can't go back.
I wish I were young again!	I am not young anymore.

Examples:

- I wish I wore more comfortable shoes, though.
- I wish I talked to more people there.
- I wish I weren't so shy ...
